“The Jewish Lady, The Black Man and the Road Trip”
Buckle Up For a Fast Ride and a Red-Hot Read

For Immediate Release (Miami, Florida - October 2008)

When (then) newbie author Carol Sue Gershman settled in at Miami-Dade Community College for her memoir writing class, little did she know that her two-plus page short story “Adventure In Love” would cause such a stir - much less blossom into one of the Autumn seasons hottest-selling novels.

In flagrant celebration of her sizzling streak of independence, the author wears her penchant for sensually-charged adventure and travel like an expensive, custom-fitted French bustier. Carol Sue makes no apologies, harbors no secrets and shares the intimate details of her romantic journey with grace and a unique honesty that deems the book compelling, exciting and most of all - believable.

This distinctive memoir celebrates race relations while serving as a poignant travelogue. The reader rides in tandem as this bold interracial couple embarks on a five-week action packed road trip from Miami to Montreal in her hot, yellow Mustang convertible. They visit her dynamic family and discover a level of intimacy that neither has ever known. Women of all ages will emerge enlightened and relieved to learn that sex later in life still smolders with passion, remains spicy and is here to stay.

This silver siren navigates you through an honest and juicy adventure of self-exploration and obsession while you witness the evolution of a strong, determined woman whose love for romance, passion, culture, and companionship takes her and her lover Xavier, on the ride of their lives.

This racy, romantic and poignant memoir will re-define the way the younger generation views the mature, young and adventurous at heart." Lisa Silvera, thinking media
